TWO ASSASSIN CHIEFS SEIZED

Here and There

Editorial By ALEX. H. WASHBURN

E. W. HOWE, of Kansas, is the famed "Sage of Potato Hill", left over from the past generation; but if I were to choose a practical philosopher from the present day I should name William Feather, who every month produces a little trade pamphlet known as the Imperial Type Metal magazine.

Bootleg Gasoline and Cigarettes in Ark.-Tenn. Seized

Two States Co-operate in Closing Down on Contraband Runners

Gasoline Truck Disguised With Cottonseed Hulls at Blytheville

MEMPHIS, Tenn.—(P)—A general tax war was under way in Tennessee and Arkansas Thursday. Tennessee officials checked Memphis cigarette dealers for alleged possession of counterfeit state tax stamps. Arkansas and Tennessee officials are cooperating in attempting to bar the two states against the bootlegging of untaxed gasoline. An official of the Tennessee gasoline tax unit went to Blytheville to investigate the seizure of 1,000 gallons of gasoline on which no Arkansas tax had been paid. Arkansas officials found the truck disguised with cottonseed hulls.

Ford Plotter to Prison 10 Years

Man Who Threatened Edsel Sentenced in Record Time

DETROIT, Mich.—(P)—A young of 20, who admitted in federal court he had written Edsel B. Ford that "you are on the spot and if you want to live it will cost you $5,000," was indicted, arranged, pleaded guilty, and sentenced to 10 years in the federal penitentiary at Leavenworth Wednesday in one of the speediest moving cases in United States District Court records here.

The youth, Edward Lickwala, was arrested Tuesday night, but the fact was kept secret until Wednesday morning, when William Larson, chief of the Department of Justice Investigation Bureau here, said he had confided after his handwriting had been found to correspond with that in the extortion note.

Although Lickwala told Larson that "I never meant to kill him; I just wanted to scare him; he's got lots of money and I wanted some of it," he received his sentence in federal court with an air of bravado. He boasted to the court of previous offenses, mainly charges of tampering with automobiles and when sentence was passed he turned to the audience in the courtroom with a smirk. He was to be taken to the federal detention farm at Milan, Mich., to await transfer to Leavenworth.

Bondholders Suit on Bridge Dropped

Reopening of 1930 Condemnation Decree Is Abandoned

DE VALLS BLUFF, Ark.—(P)—Circuit Judge W. J. Waggoner Thursday dismissed, on petition of Attorney General Walter L. Pope, a bondholders' suit which sought to reopen condemnation proceedings of 1930 whereby the state acquired the toll bridge over the White river here.

The suit was filed by some 20 holders of the original first mortgage bonds issued by the White River Bridge company, asking that certain rights, including that of a lien on the bridge, be added to the 1930 decree.

The complainants alleged that certain portions of an alleged agreement between the State Highway Commission and the bridge bond trustees were by error left out of the said judgment of condemnation.

Woman Evangelist Will Open Revival

Evangelist Eupha D. Beasley will begin a revival meeting here October 29 in the Hope Gospel tabernacle, Main and East Avenue D streets. It will be her second meeting in Hope, having conducted a revival here last fall. The public is invited.

Here's how Mr. Feather feels this October:

The depression has made me weary of giving advice to others. In this brief essay I am merely trying to express my own preferences. I still believe in thrift and individualism. I have enough confidence in the future of this country to think that our money is worth owning and saving. I also believe that most Americans are like myself, preferring to be poor in a shack where we enjoy personal liberty, rather than well-to-do in a community house where we are regimented like orphans and convicts.

An here Mr. Feather tips his hat to the ladies:

For the ordinary run of conversation I turn to women if I wish to be spared disappointment. I regard a stag dinner as something that can only be endured by customer's men. Two or three men can spend a pleasant evening in conversation, but a dozen men have no resources other than drunkenness, craps or bridge.

In the Camden News recently I read an editorial reporting another successful trial run of Southern-made newsprint on the presses of the Savannah Georgia Press.

The Georgia newspaper came off at the rate of 32,000 copies per hour without a single break in the sheet of roll print.

A new market worth 150 million dollars a year is awaiting the scrub timber lands of the South when Dr. Herby's process for getting white paper out of pine is put into commercial production.

Camden is interested, because it already has a kraft (brown wrapping paper) mill of the International Paper company, the world's largest. Camden would be a potential location for a new white paper mill when the Herby process is put into production.

While Hope is not located on a river, water being vital in the manufacture of paper, it is entirely possible that a paper mill would be located between this city and Fulton, on Red river. Hope has superior railroad connections, two trunk and two branch lines—and is the center of a vast timber country.

The Herby newsprint process is particularly attractive because it utilizes pine trees under 12 years of age. It would put a definite value on millions of acres of cut-over timberlands.

Lumbermen Will Appeal Price Rule

Lumber Code Is to Be Fought to Higher Federal Courts

MEMPHIS, Tenn.—(P)—Frank A. Conkling, Memphis, spokesman for Southern hardwood lumbermen, opposed to price provisions of the lumber code, said Wednesday that the injunction enjoining six Arkansas lumber companies from delivering lumber sold at less than code prices will be appealed immediately.

The injunction was granted by Federal Judge John E. Martineau at Little Rock recently.

Conkling also announced that Lovell Taylor, lawyer for his group, would appeal before Federal Judge Ben C. Dawkins at Shreveport, La., October 22 at a hearing in which the government will ask a similar injunction in the Western Louisiana district. A temporary restraining order was entered recently.

Opponents of the price regulations have won two decisions.

El Dorado Here for Game Thursday

Bobcats Slightly Heavier Than Oil City's 1934 Squad

3 Hope Regulars and 2 El Dorado Players Out With Injuries

BRAND NEW TEAM

Coach Dalrymple Has But One Regular Left Over From 1933

Smarting under two defeats in successive week-ends against Fordyce and Hot Springs, Coach Foy Hammons' determined pack of Bobcats will attempt to turn back El Dorado High School here at 8 o'clock Thursday night.

The Bobcats will have three players on the sidelines with injuries, Hobbs, Hitchcock and Jack Turner, but the team as a whole is in good physical and mental shape.

Fearful of Wildcat passes, the Hope team buckled down to an air defense in practice sessions this week in an effort to erase mistakes encountered in the overhauled game last Friday night which paved the way for Hot Springs victory.

The Bobcats also have worked overtime in shaping a fast-breaking running attack, featuring Payne and Madison.

Hope Slightly Heavier

The two teams are about equal in weight, according to the starting lineup, with the Bobcats having a slight advantage in the line.

It will be the sixth game for El Dorado and the fifth for Hope. The Wildcats have one state victory to their credit, having beaten Malvern last week, 44 to 0. Prior to that El Dorado was beaten by Crossett, 8 to 6, lost to Longview, Texas, 7 to 0, and then dropped a hard-fought battle to Haynesville, La., 13 to 0.

The Bobcats have broken even in four games, winning over Hamburg.

Deputy Mistaken for a Moonshiner

So He Adds Other Fellow's Still to His Growing Collection

NEWPORT, Ark.—Deputy Sheriff Millard Brodgen of Jackson county is ahead one still as a result of picking up a hitch-hiker Saturday night.

Brodgen said he had raided a moonshine plant near Newport and had placed the still on the bumper of his automobile and started back to Newport when he was flagged by a man on the side of the road. When he stopped his car, the man, who was named by the officer, approached the still-laden machine and asked for a lift into town.

Brodgen, hoping to have a little fun, asked the man if he hadn't seen what was tied on the bumper. The man not only had seen the still, but asked where he was going to set the still up. Brodgen, seeing the hitch-hiker was ignorant of his identity, replied that it "isn't far to the spot." Then he asked, "But can you keep your mouth shut?" "Oh, sure," replied the erstwhile hitch-hiker, "you see I've got one running down the road about a mile."

The hitch-hiker got his ride to the county jail. His still is reposing in the sheriff's office near the one which caused all the trouble.

Gold Revaluation Case Taken to America's Highest Court

If U. S. Fails, Gold Bond Holders Would Collect $1.69 in Currency for Every Dollar in Gold Claims

WASHINGTON.—(P)—Emphasizing that billions of dollars and "perhaps even the financial stability of the national government" are involved in the question of the validity of the act suspending gold payments, the United States sought Wednesday to support this law by bringing to the supreme court a case now pending in the Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals without waiting for that court to act on it.

The case arose out of the gold clause in bonds issued by the St. Louis, Iron Mountain & Southern railway, which is now in the hands of receivers. Some of the holders are demanding payment in gold or its equivalent in currency.

The government emphasized that the matter is serious, because, should the gold clause be sustained, debtors would have to pay $1.69 in present lawful money for each $1 borrowed. This would arise from the fact that every dollar at present is backed by

Criminal Charge Robs Him of Civil Rights—Walters

Californian Declares Situation Forced Him to Sign Papers

HE WAIVES DIVORCE

Kidnaping Charge Dropped After Relinquishing Child, He Says

Declaring that he was compelled to sign papers withdrawing his California divorce action and waiving all claims to the custody of his 2-year-old son under threat of criminal prosecution on a kidnaping charge, G. E. Walters left Hope for Chicago on the 9:35 train Wednesday night after issuing a signed newspaper statement giving his side of the sensational affair at the Missouri Pacific station Friday night, October 12.

Mr. Walters' statement, published by The Star under its policy of printing both sides of a case, follows:

"Mrs. Coralar Walters deserted me in September 1933 and left California for the reason that an operation was to be performed within two weeks after her arrival here, and return to California before Christmas with our child, but she used the hundred dollars I gave her for other purposes; and then she and her mother wrote asking me to send her money again to have the operation performed, in December 1933, and after receiving this hundred dollars she refused to have the operation and used the money for other purposes; then again in March 1934 she asked that I send her money for an operation again, and so she sent a wire stating: 'Have made arrangements to be operated on next Monday. Please send me $100 to cover part of the expenses for my operation.' (Which would have been March 9, 1934.)

"When she refused to have the operation or return to California with our child I filed suit for divorce on the grounds of desertion and then made a trip here and she finally had the operation after my arrival at a later date, of which I also gave her more money for her operation, which amounts to (from September 1933 to March 1934) a total of $672 which includes different amounts during that time.

"After the operation she agreed to return to California within six weeks which would have been some time in May 1934. Which, after regaining her health to the extent of being able to travel, she refused to do.

"When a woman deserts a husband in the state of California she automatically loses all her legal rights in the event of a divorce suit.

"Arriving here last Thursday after traveling thousands of miles I found she refused to allow me to see our baby, Gary, Walters, until after I took the matter up with the police, and then they finally convinced her that they thought I should have a right to see my child, and so consented, but would not allow me to take the child from the house, but when I was leaving for Chicago October 12 she with some of her friends brought me off and just as the train was pulling out I said to the child 'Kiss me and I have got to go,' which he did—and remember, I hadn't seen him for several months and didn't know when I would get a chance to see him again and the child legally belonged to me and I was in Hope, Arkansas, at a night and day and only allowed to see him for not more than three hours at the moment I started off with him on the train. Death to the Assassin!

A saber had just flashed down, the hilt plainly visible in the cavalryman's hand, and the assassin of King Alexander I of Yugoslavia was reeling to his death, arms outflung futilely to guard his head, when the cameraman snapped this picture. Inside the royal car, shown halted in a Marseilles street, the king had slumped back, dying, in the rear seat. Foreign Minister Louis Barthou of France, also mortally wounded. At the right can be seen the crowd, straining at the rope barriers which held them back from the route of the king's car.

New Deal Slipping on Digest's Poll

17 States Opposed, Digest Finds on Small Test Vote

Seventeen States now vote a majority opposed to Roosevelt's acts and policies in a nation-wide checkup poll of 65,000 ballots just conducted by The Literary Digest, as evidenced by final percentage returns published in this week's issue of the magazine.

The tabulation of the recent checkup poll shows 59.77 percent of the ballots for 49.03 per cent against the New Deal, while the vote in an earlier balloting last spring 69.93 per cent of the vote then was registered in favor of Roosevelt's acts and policies, making a decrease of 18.96 per cent in affirmative sentiment during the half-year interval.

The first poll of 65,000 mailed to all states is said to have been conducted in March and April of this year, two months before The Literary Digest's 15,000,000-ballot poll on the New Deal, which larger "straw" referendum showed a 61.15 per cent vote of confidence for the President's policies.

The identical same 65,000 people to whom ballots were sent in the spring poll were again asked, in August and September, what they "now" thought of the New Deal, it is announced.

In the earlier poll, forty-seven states gave a majority approval "on the whole" for Roosevelt's acts and policies during his first year as President. The recent checkup poll of the same voters showed thirty-one states "now" registering a 50 per cent, or more, sentiment for the New Deal.

The 17 states voting against the President's policies elect a combined total of Congressmen equal to nearly one-half the membership of the house of representatives.

Lieutenant Governor Also Steps Aside for the "Kingfish"

BATON ROUGE, La.—(P)—Governor O. K. Allen was reported resting at a health resort beyond Louisiana's borders Thursday.

Call Grand Jury in Kidnaping Case

Kentucky to Probe Stoll Ransom-Affair This Saturday

LOUISVILLE, Ky.—(P)—A special grand jury to inquire into the kidnaping of Mrs. Alice Speed Stoll Thursday was summoned by the federal district judge Charles I. Dawson.

In the meantime, the search is being continued for Thomas H. Robinson, Jr., named by the Department of Justice as the kidnaper. Mrs. Robinson is being held by police as the woman who guarded Mrs. Stoll in an Indianapolis (Ind.) apartment.

Ask Death Penalty

Copyright Associated Press

LOUISVILLE, Ky.—(P)—The death penalty for the kidnaping of Mrs. Alice Speed Stoll, was demanded Wednesday by the United States government as federal agents continued seeking the man named as the mad abductor—Thomas H. Robinson Jr., of Nashville.

Mrs. Stoll told her husband the former asylum inmate had shut her up in a dark closet after binding and gagging her.

"If I thought I was going to die," she said. "He had dragged her before snatching her from home last Wednesday for $50,000 ransom. Only $500 has been recovered so far as is known."

Robinson who once worked for the Stoll Oil Company here, was said by United States District Attorney Thomas J. Sparks to be liable to the death penalty under the Lindbergh law. As amended it authorizes execution when the victim is injured.

Kidnaping and conspiracy to kidnap Mrs. Stoll, was charged jointly against the slender six-footer, whose long, rambling, neatly typed ransom note expressed hatred of capitalists, his wife, Frances, and his father, Thomas Henry Robinson, Sr., of Nashville.

Mrs. Robinson was arraigned here and sent to jail in default of $50,000 bond.

"I know of no crime more serious," Sparks told the United States Commissioner Eugene M. Darley, "than a crime of this character."

Mrs. Robinson, a woman in her early thirties, sat with her face averted from the court, haggard and worn from nearly 24 hours of suspense and grilling since she was caught. Her face wore a morose expression, but at times she flared in anger. She carried a black purse and a small manila paper sack in which were a few personal belongings.

Floyd, 2 Wounded Companions Sought

They Hold Up Farmer and Steal Load of Automobile Tools

DES MOINES, Ia.—(P)—Iowa officers swept over south central Iowa Thursday searching for Charles (Pretty Boy) Floyd, No. 1 public enemy of the Southwest, and two wounded companions.

They were believed to have escaped with an odd assortment of loot—automobile tools—from the automobile of a frightened farmer Wednesday night.

The farmer identified one of the men who halted him on a highway as Floyd. Two of the four other members of the band were wounded.

Back Taxes Asked in Federal Suits

100 Corporations Are Assessed Millions by the Treasury

Copyright Associated Press

WASHINGTON.—(P)—As part of a move to close revenue law loopholes, the Treasury was disclosed Wednesday to have notified around 100 corporations that they owe the government scores of millions of dollars in deficient taxes.

A tax deficiency of $17,199,797 was shown to have been assessed against Fisher & Co., of Detroit, holding concern for investments of the six Fisher brothers, long powerful figures in the automobile industry.

Aiming particularly to curb alleged illegal transfer of profits to surplus to avoid surtax payments by stockholders, the Treasury has levied on around five score other companies penalties of 50 per cent of net income for the years concerned.

Nearly 50 of the companies have replied, denying the allegations and in many instances challenging constitutionality of the penalty provision, contending it is an executive usurpation of judicial power.

The holdings of many wealthy persons and families throughout the country are included among those from which the government is seeking to exact penalties. In most instances, individual identity is cloaked by the corporation.

Among those receiving notices is the Matson Securities Company, of San Francisco, holding large interests in the Matson Navigation Company and in various Hawaiian development enterprises. A total deficiency of $374,737 was asked for 1930.

Assessments aggregating $100,788 have been placed against William DeMille. Others were made against Cecil B. DeMille. Both are Hollywood moving picture producers.

TURIN, Italy.—(P)—Dr. Ante Pavelich and Egon Kvaternik, alleged by French police to be the master-minds behind the assassinations of King Alexander of Yugoslavia and Foreign Minister Louis Barthou of France, were arrested here Thursday.

Their arrest was made at the request of France.

Both men denied complicity in the assassinations, but were held awaiting the arrival of French police.

The communique announcing the arrests did not state any suspected connection between the two prisoners in the murders at Marseilles.

BELGRADE, Yugo-Slavia.—(P)—The body of the murdered King Alexander was placed Thursday near those of his ancestors in the royal memorial chapel in Topolo.

While 50 men bore the sarcophagus to the chapel all activities throughout Yugo-Slavia remained at a standstill for two minutes as the common people paid tribute to their fallen king.

Precautions were taken to prevent any assassinations as three kings—Peter the Second (son of Alexander), Carol of Rumania, and Boris of Bulgaria—appeared in the funeral cortege.

Found Alive, Girl Now Isn't Wanted

Lavaca (Ark.) Girl Virtual Double for Kansas City Victim

PINE BLUFF, Ark.—Officers of two states early Wednesday night cleared up the Winnie Mae McCrea angle of the strange case of the murdered Kansas girl and the Kansas officers returned to their task of attempting to identify the young woman whose body was found in a Kansas cornfield.

Winnie Mae, 18, beloved when it was supposed she was dead, but apparently unwanted in life, returned to the fisherman's shack on the banks of the Arkansas river near here to await the birth of her child.

John H. Leutert of the Kansas state police, came here Wednesday night and identified the girl found living in the fisherman's shack as the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James McCrea of Lavaca who already had claimed the Kansas body as that of their daughter.

The officer expressed amazement at the almost complete resemblance between the two girls. Pictures of the dead girl taken in Kansas City, which he brought with him, bore out his contention that the case was the most puzzling coincidence he ever had encountered.

The Kansas officer accompanied Sheriff John B. Williams of Fort Smith and Mr. and Mrs. McCrea from Kansas City to Fort Smith where he left the sheriff and the parents, and continued on here.

He did not take the girl back to Fort Smith. She "sorta" wanted to go, she said, but didn't know what she would

Women Resist Disease Better Than Men

We like to think that men are much stronger than women, yet investigations indicate that serious diseases, involving organs that occur in both the male and female, afflict men oftener than they do women. The cause of this inherent weakness in the male is difficult to explain.

In the considerations that have been given to the subject, one authority said that, since boys are larger than girls at birth, nutrition and the health of the female are more difficult and that this might account for the greater weakness of the male.

It might also be thought that nature makes less provision for the safety of the male than for the female, realizing that the male is less important in the natural scheme of reproduction. The chemical activities of life go on more rapidly in the male than in the female.

Taken altogether, the evidence is good that the male resists disease less well than does the female. Some of the factors which have been thought of importance are those related to indulgence in alcohol, likelihood of exposure, and overwork.

These, however, are of small importance in comparison to the fact that the constitution of the male is somehow insufficiently, men are afflicted with trouble in their stomachs and intestines much more than are women. The tendency of an ulcer in the "small" intestine to perforate is twice as great in the male as in the female.

Men suffer far more frequently from cancers of the lip, the larynx, the tongue and tonsil than do women. Men suffer more frequently from tuberculosis of the lungs, from pneumonia, and from all sorts of disturbances of the blood vessels.

Women, on the other hand, seem to suffer more than men do with valvular diseases of the heart and with chronic arthritis. Women also suffer a great deal more than men with backache and this is definitely related to the strain that is put on the feminine structure of the body and by the problems of childbirth.

Of special interest is the fact that women suffer far more than men do from exophthalmic goiter and from functional diseases of the nervous system. From the point of view of suicide, the statistics show that four times as many men commit suicide as do women, but women make many more suicidal attempts that fail.

These studies of the distribution of diseases are not only interesting, but of great practical value in determining the nature of diseases of various kinds.

Invites Americans to a New Frontier—Secretary Walter Calls for Modern Pioneer

In "New Frontiers," Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace undertakes to show that the New Deal is only a first step in a brand new job of pioneering which the American people must undertake.

We must become pioneers, he says, because the world we are used to has slipped out from under us. Old old frontier is gone; we have become a creditor nation, instead of a debtor; scientific management and mass production have led us to the doors of an age of plenty.

The result, he says, is that a new world is waiting for us to move in and take possession. The task is both simple and complex. Simple because it requires only the striking of a fair balance between the interests of farmer, worker, capitalist, and consumer; and complex, because we cannot do this without completely re-orienting our mental attitude.

The secretary discusses the history of the AAA at some length. He says that he likes the notion of plowing under cotton, killing baby pigs and restricting food production generally, as little as any one, but he insists that, as an emergency measure, this policy

YOUR CHILDREN

Wishing Children—Their Tendency to Dream Should Be Diverted Into Energy

Is "wishful thinking" as undesirable as "mind specialists" are inclined to think? It is best for a child, or adult, that matter, to dream about what might be instead of what is? Aren't there times when "dreams" are not only a relief but a real incentive to pull one's self together and go after the thing desired?

After all what is ambition but wishful thinking plus effort? It is as good a definition of ambition as anything I know. The dangers of this "wanting," of course, are easy to understand. First, it can be a source of real unhappiness rather than happiness. Children who won't see the nice things around them because they are blindfolded by some other wish often develop into the type of people perpetually dissatisfied with real blessings. There are many people who live in constant oblivion to pleasant environment because they persist in craving the impossible.

The trouble with this state of mind is that the moment a dream does come true, they are off in another direction, instantly discounting their good luck. To put it in slang, they get the "gimmies". Another bad thing about chronic wishing is the "escape" side. Children who find life and its duties irksome frequently go off into these dreams in which everything is pleasant. They "wish" they were fairies with wands. They "wish" they were princes or princesses who live on sugar plums and never have to get up. The dreams of "escape" children sometimes take fantastic shapes indeed.

Yet, I still contend that this is normal to a degree. All of wish for something constantly. There is one crucial point, however, that I believe every parent should know. The wishful child is seldom the energetic one. This is the difference between real ambition and the too hopeful laxity of the dreamer that turns in time to pessimism and disillusion.

To force such a child to activity will only cause a further withdrawal into himself and turn his face against work or even everyday activities that other children find congenial. As it is a matter of emotion and a deep involvement of the "self" complex, care must be taken. The thin edge of the wedge will be to get him busy about things he really likes to do. Many adults, and successful ones, cannot and will not work at any thing they are not emotionally interested in.

This is not so desirable, as most of life's work must be routine. But better to have such energy than no energy at all. Besides a child will often step out of this self activity to other things. It has to be done in childhood if it is to be successful. Adults seldom make the adjustment.

Wish-thinking leads to wish-fulfillment if properly handled. But the energy has to be planted and cultivated. The wish child should be a busy child. Watch his hobbies and use them to stir him to real life.

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

By Alicia Hart

Only Soap Is Condition That Can Be Cured By Regular Treatment and Care

Though it takes a good deal of effort, a little money and quite a lot of time, excessive oiliness of the hair can be cured. The easiest way, of course, is to put yourself in the hands of a scalp expert who will give you semi-weekly treatments. However, few beauty budgets allow for more than one visit a week to the hair-dresser and unless your good-grooming allowance is rather large, you'll simply have to glorify yourself.

First of all, see that you have three items with which to start your getting-rid-of-oil routine. You must have a good hair brush, a liquid castile or tar soap shampoo and a tonic that has been made especially to correct an oily condition.

You must not wash your hair oftener than once every ten days. As a matter of fact, if you use the tonic every night, you won't need to shampoo as frequently. Tonic should be applied to the scalp with cotton pads. If you don't want to spoil a wave, let it dry before you start brushing.

Place the brush flat against the scalp with each stroke and, turning it outward slightly, pull it upward to the ends. Wipe the brush and repeat until every inch of scalp and each hair has been stimulated and cleaned.

Use hot oil the night before you intend to shampoo. Simply warm a bit of olive oil, rub it into your scalp, wrap a clean towel around your head and go to bed, letting the oil stay on all night. Next day, wash your hair two or three times with liquid soap and plenty of warm water, rinse twice and then pour on a solution consisting of one-half cupful of vinegar and one quart of warm water. Rinse again with clear water and, if possible dry your hair in the sunshine.

The Claw of the Forgotten Murder

By CARLETON KENDRAKE

BEGIN HERE TODAY

When DAN BLEEKER, publisher of The Blade, learned that CHARLES MORDEEN, police reporter, had been mysteriously killed, he determined to employ SIDNEY GRIFF, famous criminologist, to solve the murder.

Mordeen had been assigned to learn all he could about FRANK B. CATHAY, wealthy and prominent who had threatened to sue The Blade because the newspaper reported Cathay had been arrested. Later it was proven that Cathay and accompanied by a man named MARY HIGGINS, was an impostor. The Blade published a retraction.

Then Mordeen is found dead and a few hours later comes news that Cathay is dead—possibly poisoned.

Sidney Griff undertakes the case. He calls on Cathay's doctor and finds a note to see G. H. L. F. FISHER, Cathay's friend and lawyer.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XIII

GRIFF had been listening to the lawyer intently. "How long," he asked, "was this reporter in Riverview?"

"Just a day I think. Perhaps not a day. I don't know. He made some investigation and made some comments. He spent most of his time in the office of The Riverview Chronicle, a newspaper, by the way, which has been hostile to Mr. Cathay's political candidacy for membership in the city council."

"Did that man," asked Griff, "call on you, counselor?"

"No, certainly not. He was collecting evidence which would have a tendency to undermine my client's reputation. Naturally, he would hardly have called upon me."

"You didn't know him then?"

"No."

"Perhaps then," said the criminologist, "you entirely missed the significance of the account in The Blade this morning of the murder of one of its reporters?"

Charles Fisher gripped the edges of his desk. His head was thrust forward. His eyes fastened upon the criminologist's face and gradually grew wider and wider.

"Good heavens!" he said. "You don't mean to tell me... that it was... that is, it wasn't the same man?"

Griff nodded.

Charles Fisher got slowly to his feet. He mopped his forehead with a handkerchief, regarded Griff with wide, startled eyes.

"Now," said Fisher slowly. "I can understand your interest in the matter. I understand who is employing you."

Griff remained silent.

The attorney looked at his watch, went to the window and stood with his back to Griff, looking down at the street. He turned at length to the criminologist.

"Has the newspaper," he asked, "any idea of the motive for the murder?"

Griff shrugged his shoulders.

"Really, counselor," he said, "I can't tell you just what the newspaper knows or what it suspects."

Griff got to his feet.

"Is there," asked Fisher with a forced attempt at his old cordiality, "anything I can do to assist you, Mr. Griff, which will not in any way conflict with my professional obligations to my clients?"

"I think not," he said.

The two men shook hands.

Griff went at once to a public telephone, called the office of Dr. P. C. Cooper and explained to the nurse that it was quite important that he talk with Doctor Cooper upon a personal matter.

A moment later he heard Doctor Cooper's voice on the wire.

"This is Griff, Doctor Cooper," he said, "the criminologist who called on you earlier this morning."

"Yes," said Doctor Cooper in a tone that was calm and wary. "What is it you wish, Mr. Griff?"

"I just wanted to tell you," Griff said, "that I have been in communication with the counsel who is representing Mrs. Frank B. Cathay, and that the Cathays are planning to have you cited before the medical board because of the statements you made concerning the symptoms of Mr. Frank B. Cathay."

"Yes?" said Doctor Cooper in the tone of voice one uses in asking a courteous question.

"Yes," Griff said, "and I just thought, Doctor Cooper, that if a post-mortem should disclose that your diagnosis was correct and that of Doctor Amstead incorrect, it might go a long way toward eliminating the necessity for any defense upon your part."

Griff ceased talking and held the telephone to his ear. For a moment there was only the buzzing noise of the wire. Then Doctor Cooper's voice said in the same cautious, thoughtful tone, "Thank you."

There was a click at the end of the line.

Griff slipped the receiver back on its hook.

SIDNEY GRIFF'S taxicab deposited him at the wide entrance to the Cathay mansion.

"You want me to wait?" asked the cab driver.

"Yes," Griff said, and started up the long cement walk which led from the ornamental wrought-iron gate to the porch on the front of the house.

He had almost reached the porch when the door opened and a tall man with broad shoulders and a slight paunch which bulged out of his waistcoat stepped with quick vigor from the house and turned sharply to the right, walking across the porch to stairs which led to a driveway that came from the garage.

Griff called a low comment: "Hello, Raelne," he said. "You going to pass me up?"

The man whirled at the sound of the voice. His eyes stared at Sidney Griff with an expression of quick recognition which speedily gave way to wary appraisal. He turned and walked back toward Griff with a leisurely manner.

Griff watched him with eyes that twinkled with amusement, yet were cautiously watchful.

"Business here, Raelne?" he asked.

Carl Raelne stood with his feet planted slightly apart, his big shoulders squared, his eyes staring steadily at the criminologist.

"Business here, Griff?" he asked mockingly.

Griff nodded. "Yes," he said. "I want to see Mrs. Cathay."

"Hardly a time for social visits," Raelne pointed out.

Griff shrugged his shoulders in a polite gesture of dismissal.

THERE was a moment of silence.

"I wonder if you can tell me just what angle of this case you're working on?" Raelne asked.

"How many angles has it?" Griff countered.

Raelne frowned impatiently.

"Oh," he said, "I'm just a square-toed dick. I can't match wits with you if it comes to a matter of being indefinite in conversation. You don't have to tell me if you don't want to, but don't be so damned superior. After all you're only human, you know, even if you are Sidney G. Griff, the great criminologist."

Griff said nothing. His eyes held a twinkle of amusement.

"I thought," Raelne said, "that you might like a chance to pool information on this."

"Sure," said Griff, "that's fair enough. You start off. You tell me something, then I'll tell you something."

"That's a bargain," Raelne said. "Who are you working for?"

Griff's laugh was almost sarcastic. "So that was the way you wanted to pool information, was it Raelne?"

A smooth running motor slid into view, stopped where the side steps of the porch met the driveway. The Cathay chauffeur slid from behind the wheel, opened the rear door of the car and stared steadily at the two men.

"There is," said Griff musingly, "something strange about that chauffeur, Raelne. Turn around and take a look at him. He wears the livery of a servant but notice the expression on his face. He's evidently very much irritated because we're talking together."

Raelne did not turn, but he straightened abruptly and his tone became formal.

"He's in a hurry," he said. "He's under instructions to get me to a certain place. I've got to start. Goodbye, Griff."

Raelne crossed the porch with long strides. The chauffeur stood at rigid attention, his face a mask. As the chauffeur slammed the door, turned to face Sidney Griff.

"You can't see Mrs. Cathay," he said, jerking open the front door of the car. He did not wait for a reply, nor did he turn back for any instructions from the detective.

In the next installment Griff calls on Mrs. Frank Cathay, head of her husband's million-dollar insurance policies.

Irvin S. Cobb to Battle Sinclair

Kentucky Democratic Humorist Admits He's "Republican"

LOS ANGELES, Calif.—(AP)—Irvin S. Cobb, the humorist, who recently became a film comedian, Monday night turned political speaker against Upton Sinclair, the Democratic gubernatorial nominee.

"I hate to admit it," he said, "but for once these black Republicans are standing on the right side of the fence in this state."

"In justice to Mr. Sinclair, though, I want to say this: I have always been able to depend upon him. He has never yet disappointed me. He is always wrong."

"Sinclair hasn't been taken into the Democratic party. He is trying to make the Democratic party be absorbed by Sinclair."

"His idea apparently of a platform is the same as a Pullman porter's—something to ride on a short time and get off of hurriedly, and I deny he is a convert to Democracy."

"In normal times it is certain that Upton Sinclair, running on his principles, wouldn't get 50,000 votes, but an empty belly, plus a proportion of empty heads in times of depression make him an active menace to the future prosperity in economic recovery of this state."

France to Return to Tariff System

Will Abandon Quota Method Because of Many Injustices

PARIS, France—(AP)—France was said Tuesday to be preparing to abandon the quota system and return to old-fashioned tariffs.

The two chief financial newspapers of Paris announced this change was in sight and Max Hymans, president of the Chamber of Deputies Committee on Customs and Commercial Affairs, said Parliament was dissatisfied with the results of quotas and ready to consider another system.

Hymans proposed to abolish the quotas in connection with negotiation of new trade treaties, but in other quarters it was learned the government planned to effect the change by decree.

Increases in tariff rates, which would naturally accompany dropping of quotas in order to maintain protection and bargaining power, already have gone into effect.

The Doumergue government has encountered widespread criticism of the quota system, with charges of corruption and complaints of injustice and favoritism.

VALUES

Few people realize the true value of their newspaper. To them it has become such a commonplace item in their daily routine that they give no thought to the actual cost of producing their paper, or to the actual value they receive by its daily appearance in their homes.

But, if they could visualize the vast amount of capital that is invested in news services, special features, distant correspondents, typesetting and printing equipment, and the thousand and one other items that go to make a daily paper interesting, timely and accurate, they would be amazed at their ability to purchase their paper for a few cents.

And, this costly and valuable service is made possible by those merchants and manufacturers who consistently advertise in your paper's columns. To them is justly due your patronage, for they are making it possible for you to receive a complete and comprehensive digest of local and world wide events each day.

Baby Registration Duty of Parents

Their Failure May Handicap Child Later on in Life

LITTLE ROCK.—It is the moral obligation of all parents in Arkansas, to cooperate in the statewide "Register Your Baby" campaign being carried on by the Federal Bureau of the Census, the Bureau of Vital Statistics of the State Board of Health, and the Arkansas Emergency Relief Administration, in the opinion of Dr. W. B. Grayson, state health officer and director of the campaign.

"Parents failing to take advantage of the opportunity offered by the Bureau of Vital Statistics and the Bureau of the Census, to have their babies properly registered may have cause to regret that neglect when they realize that their children may be greatly handicapped and embarrassed later in life," said Dr. Grayson. "Heartily cooperation, therefore, in the campaign on the part of our citizenship is highly important, and especially it is the moral obligation of all parents," he added.

Among other things, birth certificates are necessary for the issuance of work permits. Dr. Grayson pointed out. Although records of baptism, birth records kept in the family Bible, and opinions submitted by physicians may upon occasions be accepted in lieu of birth certificates, the authorities are not forced to accept these substitutes and as time goes on are less inclined to do so, Dr. Grayson said.

Cards requesting information regarding all children born in Arkansas, in the past 12 months are now being delivered to every family in Arkansas, sent by the Federal Bureau of the Census. These cards are to be returned to the Bureau of the Census, without postage, and will be forwarded to Little Rock, for checking against present birth registration records.

Out of every 100 married couples in France, 23 have no family, 25 have only one child, and 22 have two children. Less than 3 per cent have more than seven children.

Judge Proposes to Push Full Recount

Overrules Hamburg Demurrer—Appeal Taken to Supreme Court

HAMBURG, Ark.—A demurrer in the Tilman B. Parks-Wade B. Kitchen election contest being tried in Circuit Court here before Judge Patrick Henry of Monticello, was overruled Wednesday. In announcing his decision, the court said:

"I am going to overrule the demurrer and motion to dismiss and give the law a broad construction and try to find who got the most votes and is entitled to the nomination."

The contest suit was filed by Kitchen after officials returns from the run-off primary indicated that Parks was nominated by about 300 votes. Soon after the suit was filed it was discovered that practically every ballot box in Ashley county had been tampered with.

Following announcement by Judge Henry, it was decided in chambers to recess until 9 a. m. Friday to give lawyers for Parks an opportunity to file and argue a petition for a writ of prohibition before the Arkansas Supreme Court at 2 p. m. Thursday to prevent Judge Henry from hearing the contest. Parks' lawyers will ask the Supreme Court to declare that Judge Henry lacks jurisdiction.

The three grounds upon which the demurrer was argued Wednesday were:

First, that the original complaint did not set forth the total vote cast for each candidate at the first primary and that there was no allegation of fraud on the part of Parks.

Second, that the complaint did not give the specific vote of each candidate in each county and precinct in the entire district at the second primary.

Third, that the court has no jurisdiction to go behind the certificate and hold an election to determine the result, but in cases where there is no other manner of determining the result the court must accept the certificate of the Central Committee.

Don't Shoot the Pianist!—White

Kansas Editor Expresses Confidence in the White House

NEW YORK.—(AP)—William Allen White, widely known editor, observed that "the devil, himself, must have invented the presidency" as he met reporters in a New York club Wednesday night.

White, editor of the Emporia Gazette, is in New York for the award next week of the Roosevelt medal, to be presented to him on the seventy-sixth anniversary of the birth of President Theodore Roosevelt.

"From the man in the White House," said White, "we require the patient fulfillment of Sisyphus, the torture of Tantalus and the nervous tension of a man with ants in his pants."

"I supported Mr. Hoover, but it is no exhibition of loyalty to Hoover to forever be shooting the pianist when he is doing his best. Moreover it will do no good."

"Roosevelt will either make good and be political invulnerable for a time, or he will blow up all of a sudden like the boy who stood on the burning deck."

"It is either hari kari or a tent in 'fame's eternal camping ground' for Franklin Roosevelt."

"President Roosevelt has lost little prestige. He would poll as many votes this year as two years ago. But they would be other votes than those that elected him."

"He is doing his best. He had to put on a show when he first came to the White House. The country demanded action, so he began spinning many tops which go round and round and get to wobbling and have to be removed."

"It is not his fault. It is the mood of the people, the spirit of the time. 'But heaven only knows the end of it. Yet I haven't it in my heart, and apparently I am the common man for he hasn't it in his heart, to desert the president, to be supercilious with him."
